Neil is a corporate and securities partner.

Neil's practice focuses on representing emerging growth companies throughout their lifecycles and venture capital firms in their investment activities. He has significant experience representing both companies and investors in early stage and growth stage venture financings, as well as mergers and acquisitions for a wide variety of technology companies, including companies in the consumer internet, software, healthcare, telecommunications, financial and entertainment technology industries.

Neil returned to Gunderson Dettmer after working at AltSchool as associate general counsel. Prior to joining Gunderson Dettmer the first time, Neil was a corporate associate in the New York office of Sullivan & Cromwell LLP.
