Stephen is of counsel in our Boston office.

Stephen focuses his practice on private company transactions and general corporate matters. He is particularly focused on guiding early stage technology companies through their initial legal challenges in a manner that will maximize their opportunities for future growth. Stephen has represented both companies and investors in dozens of venture capital financings ranging in size from small seed financings to later stage rounds involving valuations in excess of one hundred million dollars. His practice also includes representation of clients in public offerings and mergers & acquisitions.
