

Robust.AI Announces Partnership with DHL Supply Chain

Client News

February 1, 2024

Gunderson Dettmer represented client Robust.AI, the developer of a robot cognitive platform, in its partnership with DHL Supply Chain. This strategic alliance leverages DHL Supply Chain's deep understanding of logistics challenges and proven track record in implementing automated solutions and Robust.AI's expertise in artificial intelligence and advanced robotics to develop and deploy an innovative fleet of warehouse robots.

In the announcement, Robust.AI CEO and Co-founder Anthony Jules said, "DHL Supply Chain has been an incredible partner. As the industry leader, their analytics and logistics expertise are unparalleled and have helped us refine our product workflows and AI. Working cooperatively, our teams have demonstrated meaningful productivity increases in the warehouse. DHL Supply Chain and Robust.AI share a vision that is centered around people. At Robust.AI, we build robots and AI that amplify and augment workers' abilities, and we are grateful to have a partner at massive scale who shares our drive for marrying increased efficiency with an elevated employee experience."

The Gunderson Dettmer deal team included partners Adam Reuben, Katie Gardner, and Neil Toomey and associates Anand Mehta and Erica Davis.
