Gunderson Dettmer represented client Axle Health, a Los Angeles-based healthcare technology company, in its $10 million Series A financing led by F-Prime with participation from Y Combinator, Pear VC and Lightbank. Axle Health is transforming home healthcare operations through its proprietary AI-powered logistics platform. The company's platform enables healthcare organizations to efficiently deploy clinicians for in-home visits, optimizing scheduling, route planning, and patient engagement while seamlessly integrating with existing EMR systems. The new capital will help Axle Health scale its platform, advance AI-driven scheduling and patient engagement, and grow its engineering and operations teams.

In the announcement of the transaction, CEO of Axle Health Adam Stansell said, "The healthcare industry is experiencing a fundamental shift toward home-based care, accelerated by changing patient preferences, value-based care initiatives, and advances in remote monitoring technologies. With this investment, we're positioned to meet the explosive demand for home healthcare by giving providers the technological infrastructure they need to scale operations efficiently. Our mission is to make high-quality home healthcare accessible to everyone who needs it, regardless of location or socioeconomic status."

The Gunderson deal team was led by Bennett Yee and included Jenna Finegold and Marissa Boykin.
