Gunderson Dettmer represented client ketteQ, a provider of the world's most adaptive supply chain planning solutions, in its $20 million Series B financing led by Vocap Partners.

ketteQ's cloud-native architecture and intelligent automation help organizations move beyond reactive decision-making to proactively orchestrate their supply chains, supporting revenue growth, customer satisfaction and operational resilience. The new capital will accelerate the company's global expansion, fuel continued innovation in agentic AI and strengthen delivery capacity to meet growing global demand from manufacturers, distributors and service organizations seeking faster and more innovative planning solutions.

In the announcement of the transaction, ketteQ CEO Mike Landry said, "The world's supply chains are being redefined, and ketteQ was purpose-built for this exact moment. We've shown what works: AI that acts, planning that adapts, and value delivered in months, not years. Our investors see it too, and this round allows us to stay focused, move faster, and scale what's working."
