Gunderson Dettmer partner and head of employment law practice innovation Stephanie Goutos was featured in Law360’s article, “Meet The Attys ‘Vibe-Coding’ Their Own AI Apps,” which examines how lawyers are using natural language “vibe coding” tools to build their own AI applications and improve client service.

Stephanie joined Gunderson Dettmer nearly five years ago to lead the firm’s automation efforts spanning client intakes, requests, and document creation, and has built more than 100 AI projects in recent years — including dashboards, sites, trackers and a personal brand tool shared on vibecode.law.

“I see the vibe-coding projects as an extension of that work,” Stephanie said. “They let me pressure-test ideas quickly, get early feedback from the team and explore more creative ways to use technology and innovation to deliver better client service.”
