

Resolve AI Announces $40 Million Series A Extension, $1.5 Billion Valuation

Client News

April 16, 2026

Gunderson Dettmer represented Resolve AI, the AI for running and operating software in production, in its $40 million Series A extension at a $1.5 billion valuation, led by DST and Salesforce Ventures.

Resolve AI combines custom AI models, production-specific agents, and deep systems expertise to solve the hardest problems in modern software operations. The new funding will support continued investment in Resolve AI's platform, go-to-market expansion, and long-term research initiatives, as the company builds toward AI systems capable of taking on more of the work required to run production environments.

“Foundation models are improving quickly, but they are still not enough for production operations,” said Spiros Xanthos, Founder and CEO of Resolve AI, in the announcement of the transaction. “Production environments demand reasoning over fragmented telemetry, long-running workflows, constantly changing systems, and a very high bar for accuracy. We are forming the AI Labs because closing that gap requires domain-specific models, post-training, and agentic systems designed specifically for this domain.”

The Gunderson deal team was led by Joe Raffetto and included Jesse Birbach and Esalyng Liang.
